What do we look for in a Delkash Dancer?

Sarah Mayne is seeking dancers who are passionate about Middle Eastern dance genres that are rooted in ethnic, traditional, national, religious and/or cultural heritage. She is seeking open minded, artistic individuals who have a vision to enlighten and change the uninformed & common perception of “belly dance” as a form of vulgarity. These individuals must be willing to uphold the image of sacred reverence, respect and honor to this culture and art. These individuals must be dedicated to the geographical, attire, and musical education of this form, ongoing and often intensive educational seminars and travel.

BDGR recognizes that tradition is a living and evolving process and that many dance forms stem from multiple roots, and may be influenced by the context of presentation on our stage. We strive to present pieces that respect and maintain the integrity of a culture-specific dance tradition as its primary element.

Music

Upload your music file for your personal piece to the link specified on the application form. Do not exceed 5 minutes for your choreography.

The Selection Process

Your audition will be performed before Sarah Mayne & those she may choose to participate. The auditionees are studied for their ability to learn the pre-provided choreography, integrate with current troupe members and display their enthusiasm for Raqs Sharqi.

Selection will be based upon a collective Sarah feels is essential to the positive embodiment and fruition of this dance form in a most confused and misguided community where this dance is deeply misunderstood. Dancers will be HEAVILY decided upon based on the performance abilities: Choreography memorization, professionalism, personality and comfort with performing.

Reviewing Criteria

The piece you audition is the piece being considered for future performances! Sarah will be using the following guidelines to evaluate your audition:

Technical execution — Does the dancer appear to be in command of the technique? How does the individual work with the space? How smoothly are entrances, exits and transitions accomplished?

Choreography — Is there consistency throughout the piece? Is the patterning well adapted to the stage? Does the piece build effectively?

Personal Work — Can the soloist maintain confidence in themselves? How skilled is the solo dancer in following their choreography?

Stage presence — Does the dancer project to the audience or engage their attention by some means: energy, enthusiasm, dynamics, focus, concentration, virtuosity, wit or charm?

Music — What is the quality of the music? Does the dancer work well with the music? Is the music integral to the dance?

Props — Are the props/implements used with ease and confidence? Are they well constructed and appropriate to the dance genre and piece?

Connection to cultural origin — Is the movement vocabulary, choreographic structure, music and emotional expression distinctly connected to an art form of ethnic or cultural origin? How well balanced or realized is the combination of elements, and is the integrity of the main cultural dance form maintained?
